BLOGGING - Build a Reputation as a Can't Miss Marketer

Choose a More Rewarding Blogging Career

...You don't even need to be an expert in it – it's all about sharing information and as you learn, you can share! One thing that's important is that you make sure that you love whatever topic you're blogging about. You should want to wake up every day, eager to get to your computer. If you dread it because it bores you or it's depressing, then you won't help your readers and the blog won't become profitable for you. Aside from the overall slant, you get to choose what each individual entry on your...

Adopting a Blogging Ritual

...If you're an Internet marketer who teaches Internet marketing to others, it's important to help the readers of your blog learn how to adapt to a blogging ritual seamlessly. Blogging is one of those tasks that many newbie marketers jump into without understanding how it works. They know they need to blog (because all of the top successful marketers do), and maybe for a few days – or even weeks – they stick to it religiously. They...

Supporting Yourself Financially with Blogging

...depth – or in a more comprehensive manner? Offer services from your blog. Freelancing like writing, graphics, or other services can be offered right from your blog. Coaching is something you can offer. Many people pay top dollar for one-on-one coaching sessions via Skype or even email! Blogging can be a very fun and very profitable venture if you approach it correctly. Don't make the mistake of flying by the seat of your pants. If you do this, your blog will be scattered with topics, have no set monetization plan, and you'll end up...

Module 01 The Guide To Topic Selection

...Visit Competitors' Blogs Your next stop is to see what your competitors are blogging about. Ask these questions: What topics get a lot of comments, social media shares and other interaction? What topics are all, or nearly all, of your competitors blogging about? What topics keep popping up repeatedly over time? You'll also want to be sure to check out the comments section, especially on topics that are really popular. Taking a look at what others in your niche are saying about the topic, or related topics, may give you fresh ideas of what...

Next... 9: Bring in the Reader's Senses Elsewhere in the Blogging Strategy guides, we've talked about how telling stories helps engage readers. As you're telling these stories, or if you're describing something, be sure to bring the reader's senses into your story - sight, touch, sound, smelling, taste. For example: The kitchen smelled like freshly baked chocolate chip cookies. The sunbaked rocks burned the bottom of my bare feet. The autumn leaves rustled every time the wind blew. You get the idea. If...

...for creating your blog publishing calendar. calendar.google.com Conclusion As you just discovered, there are a whole lot of plugins, platforms, apps and tools you can use to automate and make easier many of your most common blogging tasks. Now, one word of warning... Once you start looking at all the WordPress plugins available, you might be tempted to start adding a whole bunch of them to your blog. Be careful doing this, however. Sometimes various plugins don't work well together, or they "break" when WordPress unrolls a major update. The more plugins you have,...

What Blogging Challenges Do Your Readers Suffer From?

...what they're talking about. The key is to help them learn how to find topics – how to dig up new slants and fresh ideas and give commentary on them. Understanding how to review products is another basic issue for marketers who are inexperienced with blogging. They don't know how to review products so that they will be interesting to blog readers. Making an engaging connection is a big deal – and so many marketers falter with this. Everyone wants to see blog comments or get emails about how amazing their blog post was!...
